The aim of the course is to show those new to underwater photography how to start taking successful photographs/images and help existing photographers who are not having the success they had hoped for improve their technique.

Paul Naylor, marine biologist, underwater photographer and author Great British Marine Animals will lead you through

- The joy and fascination of photographing marine life: finding and choosing your subjects
- The basics of underwater photography such as lighting and composition
- When and how to use different types of equipment and how to make the most of what you already have
- How to start achieving those photographs you had expected

The weekend starts on Saturday with a morning of introduction to equipment, techniques and guidance, what subject to look for and how to make your approach. Saturday afternoon will be a practical session under the pier to take a selection of images, which will be reviewed back at the classroom. Please bring connection leads for computers including card readers if you have one.

Sunday starts with a group study of the photographs/images taken to identify those that have worked and why some didn't. This will give members of the group an opportunity to find out their strong points and areas where additional practice is required. The course will finish at lunchtime but as with our other courses a second dive under the pier can be planned if people are interested.

The cost of the course is £80 and this covers the use of the classroom, parking at Leeson House, MCS course notes and Tea / Coffee on both days. A deposit of £20 is required and the balance due on or before the course. Please make all cheques payable to: MCS (S.E.) and forwarded to me at the above address.

Please Note to reduce costs to the Society no confirmation of booking will be sent, but you will receive confirmation one month in advance that the course will run.

If you require any further information please do not hesitate to contact me.
